

ABSTRACT

A device for treating forage, to accelerate drying, and including a rotor rotated about an axis and that includes a support and at least one conditioning element. The conditioning element includes at least one active part used to work the forage, a first connecting part used to connect the conditioning element to the support by a first connection, and a second connection to connect the conditioning element to the support if the first connection breaks.